

Recipe for disaster

In the tall grass a lion prepared to launch at a zebra. The lion slowly and carefully moves closer to the zebra's blind spot. The hot sun and cool breeze sweep through the grass, being able to see the eye of the lion's perspective of the zebra. Unaware of its surroundings, the zebra continues to feed on the grass. As the lion moves closer to its prey, it steps on a twig, making a slight noise. Birds fly up, and the zebras' eyes follow; they know and run before it's too late. The lion chases after the zebra through the grass, which leads to an open area for clear visibility.
